as to Extent of Application of Clause. The whole question as to the extent of the application of the long and short haul clause of the amended interstate commerce law, particularly in connection with export and import, trans-shipment, proportional, excursion and commutation rates, was discussed at a conference before the interstate commerce commission today. The questions arise under the fourth section of the bill passed just before the adjournment of the last session of Congress, and counsel for many railroads, under a general notice recently issued by the commission, were present today to explain their views to the commission Points Taken Up.

The conference did not bear on the merits of any particular application or class of applications for relief under the fourth section, but had to do with the meaning and application of the section on certain points. George Stewart Patterson, counsel for New England railroads, who traced the development of the fourth section of the amended law from the time of the passage to the closing days of the last session of Congress, and Fred Wood, counsel for the St. Louis and San Francisco and the Chicago and eastern Illinois railroads, were the first attorneys heard. Contentions of Attorneys.

Counsel contended that section four had no application to the import and export traffic; that the inland part of the import and export traffic rate was a proportional rate, and, therefore, was not to be considered with the local and domestic rates, and that the through charge for such traffic was not a matter over which the commission had entire juris-

It has been suggested by some astronomers that the phenomenon is an enormous condensation of vapors or clouds floating in the upper regions of Saturn's atmosphere, and illuminated by our sun. Prof. Eric Doolittle of the University of Pennsylvania, when asked if he had seen the object reported from Florence, said that he had not, but that anything of the kind on Saturn is of the greatest scientific interest, owing to the general lack of knowledge about the big planet, which generally is believed to be a great
